DESCRIPTION

GENDER: *Female*AGE: *20*HEIGHT: *5'11*BUILD: *Average*HAIR: *Brown*EYES: Light Brown

NOTABLE FEATURES

Tekla has a tribal-looking tattoo around her right eye.

MOTIVATIONS

AMBITION

Ambition: Friendship.

Tekla's looking for a tribe of her own. Discordant amongst her birth family and betrayed by the friends of her formative years, it's hard for her to trust new people. Yet she misses having people around her that she feels like she can rely on. Zordd's friendship means the world to her and she'll be a loyal friend to him always. She desires more relationships as steady and dependable as that one, a surrogate family to replace the one who never quite understood her.

FRIENDSHIP

RELATIONSHIP

Relationship: Parents

One day, Tekla wants to return home in triumph. Her father is in good health but not young anymore. While she still has him, she wants to get herself into a position where she can go back to Corellia and set her family up for good. Maybe then her mother would finally leave her feeling accepted rather than scorned.

PARENTS

CAUSE

Cause: Crime

Sure, ideally, everyone would follow the rules and thrive. But life isn't fair, and Tekla knows that first hand. Sometimes you have to break the rules just to make sure you don't get stepped on, and Tekla has a good bit of sympathy for those who do so in pursuit of survival. She doesn't advocate violence against others, but a little stealing here and there to feed hungry mouths? A little cheating at cards to lighten the pockets of someone with far more money than they need? These are, in Tekla's eyes, overlookable offenses. She's stepped in more than once to help deescalate a tense situation in favor of a hungry thief, and has even paid bail for others here and there.

CRIME

REWARD

Reward: Independence

As much as Tekla craves allies and friends, she doesn't want to NEED them. She wants to make enough to buy her own ship, which she believes would exponentially increase the amount of money she could make taking jobs. She feels she's clever enough to move beyond gambling and fast-talking, and is hungry for some of the wealth of credits she believes ship-owning smugglers make. What's more, she could come and go as she pleased then, and wouldn't be beholden to anyone but the Almighty Credit for transportation.

INDEPENDENCE

OBLIGATIONS

A SCORE TO SETTLE

A Score to Settle:

Tekla learned to cheat because she was cheated, first. Though she does this less since pairing up with Zordd (he frowns on it), she won't soon forget the first time she was taken advantage of. She left behind a gambler named Bello on Corellia who stole from her and broke her heart. She can't bring herself to try and outright murder him (and with his crew around him she likely wouldn't succeed anyway, she thinks), but she's sworn to herself that someday, once she's established herself, she'll pay him back for the pain he caused her.

Family:

Tekla regularly sends money home to help her family, but it's a pittance compared to what she'd be bringing in if she'd stayed behind and taken a steady job in the shipyards. Every time she makes contact with her family, she endures relentless guilt trips from her mother and brothers. Only her father understands and approves of her choices, and it's a rare moment that she can speak with him alone to talk about it. The need to be able to help out enough to prove herself is a constant thing.

STORY

Tekla Okana has never been satisfied with accepting the hand dealt to her. Born to a lower middle class family on Corellia in 43 BBY, she was near enough to the self-sufficient to see them enjoying more than she had, but also near enough to the truly impoverished to appreciate how much worse off she could have been. This perspective kindled a hunger in her for more without allowing her to take what she had for granted. Her home life was tumultuous; though she was close to her father, Tekla and the rest of her family never really saw eye to eye. Most of them found work as laborers at the shipyard, but Tekla wanted more than a life of labor. Her father Kande used to say she had the Corellian spirit, that wanderlust that infected so many Corellians of old. In the course of trying to resist being railroaded into a life she didn't want, she took up with the wrong kinds of people and got involved in the wrong kinds of things. An attractive face and confident front carried her far in the world of gambling and guns -- as far as a teenager wanted to go, at least. She was a novelty for the more hardened thugs around her at first, but gradually picked up some skills from the unsavory types around whom she spent her time. Despite how intent her family was that she'd get a job at the shipyards with them when she came of age, Tekla quietly stored her money away and waited for the day when she'd have enough to leave Corellia behind.

Rivals in the gang she ran with had other ideas. Still young enough to be fooled sometimes, Tekla fell victim to a would-be Cassanova named Bello, whom she considered a friend. Tekla fell for him hard, but when he got close enough to discover where she kept her credits, they mysteriously disappeared. Tekla had no proof and was still fairly young, and when she accused Bello in front of their peers, most of the more established thugs around her called it a life lesson and blew it off. Tekla was devastated and angry, and began distancing herself from her crew and lashing out.

Desperate to see his daughter thrive rather than be torn down by Corellia's underworld, Kande gave her a small purse of money he'd been collecting on the sly, and begged her to leave, for her own sake. He wanted her to see the galaxy, to find a place for herself, to have a chance at making her own life. With the little bit of money he'd given and a costly favor from a friend at the shipyard, Kande was able to secure passage offworld for Tekla. She said her goodbyes to her family and promised to send back aid when she could, but the response from all but her father was a chilly one. Her mother Dara was furious that Tekla was abandoning the family, and suspicious of how she'd gathered enough money to do so. Tekla never betrayed her father's secret, not even when he had to pretend to be disappointed to see her leaving so that the family was none the wiser.

Tekla had no control over where the ship she boarded went, and didn't get terribly far on it. She disembarked at Nubia, though she quickly learned to enjoy the hard-working Nubian peoples' night life, where she turned enough credits at the gambling parlors to keep herself fed. When one of her opponents lost his passage offworld in a particularly tense game, Tekla decided on a whim to leave Nubia behind.

Some might say that choice was aided by the way her opponent's friends started whispering that she'd cheated to win the hand, but Tekla wouldn't.

Not out loud, at least.

The ship happened to be headed to Rishi which was attractive because Tekla was insanely curious about the Outer Rim. There she fell in with a Gand named Zorrd who had a mean vibroax, an even meaner skill at aiming, and a cool (if strange) way of looking at the world. He and Tekla hit it off by happenstance, and have been traveling about, taking hired work as they find it, for a couple of years now.
